

Abstract

The invention relates to a device for microfluid analyses for a substrate with plane base surface and cover surface, wherein a chamber is integrated in the substrate for receiving liquid with at least two admissions and a semipermeable or permeable membrane is arranged in the chamber, wherein the chamber is subdivided by the membrane into two sectional chambers with at least one admission each.